“The CLR is an opportunity for institutions to evolve a 19th-century artifact - the transcript- to meet the needs of the 21st-century learner and workforce - and at the same time, reinforce the value proposition of higher education to the learner and the employment sector.

It is a tool that an institution can deploy to more firmly signal its return on investment to the general public.”

Melanie Gottlieb
Executive Director of AACRAO

"CLRs are an important tool to empower learners and workers with data in an ever-growing LER ecosystem. Learning and skill development are ubiquitous whether in a classroom, in the community, or on the job. We need next-generation tools to document this learning so no skill is left on the table."

And by doing this, employers will have access to better information about a job applicant's skills and experiences, which can lead to improved access to job and career advancement opportunities and help bring about a more equitable talent marketplace."
